

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A printer includes an exposing section for exposing a recording medium, a first feed device for feeding the recording medium while contacting both side edges of the recording medium, a developing section for development of the recording medium, a recording media feed path arranged between the exposing section and the developing section, a second feed device arranged in the recording media feed path for feeding the recording medium to the developing section while contacting the both side edges of the recording medium, and a cutting device for cutting four edges of the recording medium, a third feed device arranged between the developing section and the cutting device for feeding the recording medium to the cutting device while contacting the both side edges of the recording medium. An apparatus housing retains the exposing section, the developing section, the cutting device, and the first, second, and third feed devices therein.